HE HARUMED WITH SHEEMAN TO ASEE SEA;

Trudged all the way on foot, over mountain and through morass carrying knapsack and gun, slept on brush heaps to keep out of the mud, caught cold, from the effects of which his friends thought he would never recover. Lingering with slow consumption for many years he saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised in a country newspaper, and he determined to try it. A few bottles wrought a change, six months continued use cured him. Always on the percolate to ask his country for a pension, he now says he needs none. He helped save his country he says of himself, but consumption is Longstreet. For weak lungs, spitting blood, severe coughs, and all kindred affections, use this unequaled remedy. In obstinate coughs, no matter how long standing, it is guaranteed to benefit or cure. Sold by druggists, or you have paid for it will be returned. Sold by druggists.

A COMPOUND MODEL.

Payne Gray had a mother-in-law. Her name was McLatchet. Rosina McLatchet, and she was a mother-in-law of the good old type so dear to romancists and farce writers, inasmuch as she knew a great deal more about Payne Grey's business than he did himself, made his house her happy hunting ground, and got to be almost as much disliked by her own daughter as by her daughter's husband.

Payne Grey was an artist, and, in comparison with his brother-in-law, Hamish McLatchet, could hardly be called a successful artist; for, whereas the latter painted the portraits of more or less distinguished ladies or gentlemen at $300 a head—or, to be more correct, accurately reproduced their dresses and suits and furnished them with new faces at that price—Payne Grey was content to take his scenes from the life of the masses and everybody knows which of the two lines of art is the more successful in these days.

So long as his mother-in-law did not push her interference into the domain of his studio, Payne Grey trained himself into an indifference to her meddling elsewhere. She might arrange his tables for him when he gave his little dinners, and even go so far as to revise his list of guests; she might teach his domestics their duties; or give emphatic opinions upon his choice of pictures, or bric-a-brac, or presents for his wife. He suffered all this for the sake of peace and quietness; but up till now he had been absolute monarch in his studio.

One unfortunate morning, however, Mrs. McLatchet happened to read in the newspaper a paragraph headed "Disgraceful Conduct of an Artists' Model," from which it appeared that a female member of a community usually remarkable for respectability and honesty, imagining herself badly treated by her employer, had wound up a morning's sitting by putting her umbrella through her own counterfeit presentment and cutting the eye of the artist open with the ferrule of her weapon.

This gave Mrs. McLatchet the cue for a new attack. She roundly abused the fraternity of models in general and the female model in particular. She quoted instances of guileless young artists being lured to perdition by frail but fair Desdemonas, Rebeccas, and puritan maidens. She warned her daughter of the risk she was running in allowing her husband to pass long hours of each day in the company of women who were, to use her own phrase, in the majority of cases no better than they should be. She held up her own son, Hamish McLatchet, as an instance of a young man who was successful without having recourse to the aid of hireling beauty of face and symmetry of figure; and she deplored Payne Grey's preference for a line of art which she declared to be but a remove above the ignoble.

"The world of art in which my Hamish lives and breathes," she said, "is one of refinement and culture. I would gladly consent to sit down at table beside any lady or gentleman he has painted during the last ten years. Your husband's studio is that of the pothouse and the servants' hall."

Now, Hamish McLatchet was a good fellow, and sincerely pitied poor Payne Grey, with whom he had maintained an unbroken friendship ever since they first met. To him Payne Grey confided his future trouble, and, after a quiet chat together one evening they agreed, by all means or foul, Mother-in-law McLatchet's persecution must be put

By order of the Democratic County Committee. R. E. URELL,
O. H. DAVIS, Secretary. Chairman.

THE House has passed the bankruptcy bill. One of the most important amendments to the measure, which was adopted, provides that money due for wages shall be first considered.

THEODORE BARNDALL, a large individual oil producer and a Republican, who was in Pittsburg a few days ago, said that McKean county, which was usually good for 600 Republican majority, would give Pattison 600 majority this year. He was willing to bet on these figures.

THE Minnesota Republican State Convention refused to endorse the McKinley bill in its platform. Instead the resolutions declare for an enlarged free list, and pronounce emphatically for the Blaine reciprocity scheme, especially with the South American countries.

OVER 206,000 new applicants for pensions under the Disability act of June 27 have already been acknowledged by the Pension Office, and the entire number of applications thus far will exceed 260,000. The entire number of applications under the bill will scarcely fall short of 400,000.

JOHN ORMEROD, of Coudersport, has announced himself as a Republican candidate for Congress from this district. The Times remarks that "McCormick, of Lycoming, and Niles, of Tioga, who are already in the field, probably think there were candidates enough before Mr. Ormerod shied his castor into the ring."

THE New York Sun is referring to the Treas[illegible] The fact remains that [illegible] There [illegible] A [illegible] sidera[illegible] [illegible] expen[illegible] [illegible] presen[illegible] [illegible] invariably result in [illegible] keeper[illegible] [illegible] war[illegible] [illegible] for increased [illegible]

IS [illegible] phia [illegible] char[illegible] made against him [illegible] Lewis Emery, Jr., of Bradford. The matter, however, is treating this modest request in dignified silence while the Press has been forced to acknowledge him as Quay's Republican candidate for Governor. Can honest self-respecting Republicans sustain such a candidate?

THE Force bill is meeting with marked opposition in the Republican ranks. It pleases no one, not even its originators. Independent papers do not hesitate to denounce it in unmeasured terms. The New York Herald, noted for its independence and frankness, says: The Federal Elections bill is infamy in its most odious shape, an insult to the common sense and honor of every loyal and right-thinking citizen. However, we get our noble with [illegible] The people are waking up."

Within a few days the Democratic leaders of the State will begin preparations for the campaign. The various methods of educating public interest in the work will be considered, and ways and means devised for bringing the full vote to the polls. This will be the first step in the canvass already more than hopeful. It will be one of the most important

While it is not wise to adopt the suggestions of an enemy it is safe to profit by his advice. Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson, in a recent speech, attributed the diminution of the Republican vote to the fact that the public [illegible] is against the [illegible] of [illegible] turning the title in the Austin. It may be observed that the Republicans are endeavoring to alter the conditions, and now Republican papers are being projected [illegible] At [illegible] two, if [illegible] are to be [illegible] will be [illegible] in this State to the [illegible] Republicans.

"RUTH, the Blind Girl of Hampton."

A SUCCESSFUL OPERATION.—We extract the following from the Southern New Yorker, published at Binghamton, N. Y.: "Mrs. Thomas Veazie, a specialist, of Elmira, removed from the upper lip of Miss Mollie Russell, of Windsor, N. Y., a cancer, completing the operation seven days after commencing treatment. We learn that she also removed a large cancer from the face of Mrs. Frank Carrier, of South Windsor, a short time since. The doctor has made this dread malady a study, and shows her ability to successfully cope with it. We understand she will remain at Windsor for some days."

"RUTH, the Blind Girl of Hampton."

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW.—Among the other great attractions at the Inter-State Fair, to be held at Elmira, N. Y., Sept. 1 to 12, will be an exhibition of the noted cross-country hunters and jumpers in the world. Among them will be the celebrated horse "Ontario," who recently jumped at the exhibition given at Washington, seven feet, over a rail fence, and with a man weighing one hundred and fifty pounds. Another equally noted horse known as "Lord Rosebury," who jumped a tie with "Ontario" at the Horse Show at Chicago last Winter, over a fence fifteen inches high. In addition to these celebrated horses there will be from fifty to one hundreds others of repute and excellence.

Our songs, alas! like his, have neither charm nor weight;
We only read and sing, hushed hopes and voices weary,
At night!

A DAUGHTER WORTH HAVING.

Her Clothes Were Not the Only Beautiful Thing About Her.

Two gentlemen friends who had been parted for several years, met in a crowded city street, says the N. Y. Evangelist. The one who lived in the city was on his way to meet a pressing business engagement. After a few expressions of delight, said:

"Well, I'm off. I'm sorry, but it can't be helped. I will look for you tomorrow to dinner. Remember, 2 o'clock sharp. I want you to see my wife and child."

"Only one child?" asked the other.

"Only one," came the answer, tenderly, "a daughter. But she is a darling."

And they parted, the stranger in the city getting into the streetcar for the park. After a block or two a group of five girls entered the car, they all evidently belonged to families of wealth; they conversed well. Each carried a very elaborately decorated lunch basket, each was well dressed. They, too, were going to the park for a picnic.

They seemed happy and amiable until the car again stopped, this time letting in a pale-faced girl of about 11 and a sick boy of 4 years. These children were shabbily dressed and on their faces were looks of distress. They, too, were on their way to the park. The gentleman thought so; so did the group of girls, for he heard them say, with a look of disdain:

"I suppose those ragamuffins are on an excursion, too!" "I shouldn't like to leave home if I had to look like that—would you?" This to another girl.

"No, indeed; but there is no accounting for tastes. I think there ought to be a special line of cars for the lower classes."

All this was spoken in a low tone, but the gentleman heard it. Had the child too? He glanced at the pale face and saw tears. He was angry. Just then the exclamation: "Why, there's Netty! Wonder where she is going?" caused him to look out upon the corner, where a sweet-faced young girl stood beckoning to the car-driver. When she entered the car she was warmly greeted by the five and they made room for her beside them. They were profuse in exclamations and questions.

"Where are you going?" asked one. "Oh, what lovely flowers! Who are they for?" asked another.

"I was on my way to Belle Clark's. She is sick, you know, and the flowers are for her."

She answered both questions at once, and the glanced toward the door of the car, saw the pale girl looking wistfully at her. She smiled at the child, a tender look beaming from her eyes, and then forgetting she wore a handsome velvet skirt and costly locket, and that her shapely hands were covered with well-fitted gloves, she left her seat and crossed over to the little one. She laid her hand on the boy's thin cheeks, as she asked of his sister:

"This little boy is sick, is he not? He is your brother, I am sure?"

It seemed hard for the girl to answer, but finally she said:

"Yes, miss, he is sick. Freddie better has been well. Yes, miss, he is my brother. We're going to the park to see if it won't make Freddie better."

"I am glad you are going," the young girl replied in a low voice, meant for no one's ears but those of the child. "I think it will do him good; it's lovely there, with the flowers all in bloom. But where is your lunch? You ought to have lunch after so long a ride."

Over the little girl's face came a flush.

"Yes, miss, we ought to for Freddie's sake; but you see we didn't have any lunch to bring. Tim—he's our brother—he saved these pennies so as Freddie could ride to the park and back. I guess, mebbe, Freddie'll forget about being hungry when he gets to the park."

There were tears in the lovely girl's eyes as she listened, and very soon she asked the girl where she lived, and wrote the address down in a tablet which she took from a bag on her arm. After riding a few blocks she left the car, but she had not left the little ones comfortless. Half the bouquet of violets and hyacinths were clasped in the sister's hand, while the sick boy, with radiant face held in his hand a package, from which he helped himself now and then, saying to his sister in a jubilant whisper:

"She said we could eat 'em all, every one, when we got to the park. What made her so good and sweet to us?"

And the little girl whispered back: "It's 'cause he's beautiful, as well as her c[illegible]

HE HARUMED WITH SHEEMAN TO ASEE SEA;

Trudged all the way on foot, over mountain and through morass carrying knapsack and gun, slept on brush heaps to keep out of the mud, caught cold, from the effects of which his friends thought he would never recover. Lingering with slow consumption for many years he saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised in a country newspaper, and he determined to try it. A few bottles wrought a change, six months continued use cured him. Always on the percolate to ask his country for a pension, he now says he needs none. He helped save his country he says of himself, but consumption is Longstreet. For weak lungs, spitting blood, severe coughs, and all kindred affections, use this unequaled remedy. In obstinate coughs, no matter how long standing, it is guaranteed to benefit or cure. Sold by druggists, or you have paid for it will be returned. Sold by druggists.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 10. W. H. A.

A COMPOUND MODEL.

Payne Gray had a mother-in-law. Her name was McLatchet. Rosina McLatchet, and she was a mother-in-law of the good old type so dear to romancists and farce writers, inasmuch as she knew a great deal more about Payne Grey's business than he did himself, made his house her happy hunting ground, and got to be almost as much disliked by her own daughter as by her daughter's husband.

Payne Grey was an artist, and, in comparison with his brother-in-law, Hamish McLatchet, could hardly be called a successful artist; for, whereas the latter painted the portraits of more or less distinguished ladies or gentlemen at $300 a head—or, to be more correct, accurately reproduced their dresses and suits and furnished them with new faces at that price—Payne Grey was content to take his scenes from the life of the masses and everybody knows which of the two lines of art is the more successful in these days.

So long as his mother-in-law did not push her interference into the domain of his studio, Payne Grey trained himself into an indifference to her meddling elsewhere. She might arrange his tables for him when he gave his little dinners, and even go so far as to revise his list of guests; she might teach his domestics their duties; or give emphatic opinions upon his choice of pictures, or bric-a-brac, or presents for his wife. He suffered all this for the sake of peace and quietness; but up till now he had been absolute monarch in his studio.

One unfortunate morning, however, Mrs. McLatchet happened to read in the newspaper a paragraph headed "Disgraceful Conduct of an Artists' Model," from which it appeared that a female member of a community usually remarkable for respectability and honesty, imagining herself badly treated by her employer, had wound up a morning's sitting by putting her umbrella through her own counterfeit presentment and cutting the eye of the artist open with the ferrule of her weapon.

This gave Mrs. McLatchet the cue for a new attack. She roundly abused the fraternity of models in general and the female model in particular. She quoted instances of guileless young artists being lured to perdition by frail but fair Desdemonas, Rebeccas, and puritan maidens. She warned her daughter of the risk she was running in allowing her husband to pass long hours of each day in the company of women who were, to use her own phrase, in the majority of cases no better than they should be. She held up her own son, Hamish McLatchet, as an instance of a young man who was successful without having recourse to the aid of hireling beauty of face and symmetry of figure; and she deplored Payne Grey's preference for a line of art which she declared to be but a remove above the ignoble.

"The world of art in which my Hamish lives and breathes," she said, "is one of refinement and culture. I would gladly consent to sit down at table beside any lady or gentleman he has painted during the last ten years. Your husband's studio is that of the pothouse and the servants' hall."

Now, Hamish McLatchet was a good fellow, and sincerely pitied poor Payne Grey, with whom he had maintained an unbroken friendship ever since they first met. To him Payne Grey confided his future trouble, and, after a quiet chat together one evening they agreed, by all means or foul, Mother-in-law McLatchet's persecution must be put

By order of the Democratic County Committee. R. E. URELL,
O. H. DAVIS, Secretary. Chairman.

THE House has passed the bankruptcy bill. One of the most important amendments to the measure, which was adopted, provides that money due for wages shall be first considered.

THEODORE BARNDALL, a large individual oil producer and a Republican, who was in Pittsburg a few days ago, said that McKean county, which was usually good for 600 Republican majority, would give Pattison 600 majority this year. He was willing to bet on these figures.

THE Minnesota Republican State Convention refused to endorse the McKinley bill in its platform. Instead the resolutions declare for an enlarged free list, and pronounce emphatically for the Blaine reciprocity scheme, especially with the South American countries.

OVER 206,000 new applicants for pensions under the Disability act of June 27 have already been acknowledged by the Pension Office, and the entire number of applications thus far will exceed 260,000. The entire number of applications under the bill will scarcely fall short of 400,000.

JOHN ORMEROD, of Coudersport, has announced himself as a Republican candidate for Congress from this district. The Times remarks that "McCormick, of Lycoming, and Niles, of Tioga, who are already in the field, probably think there were candidates enough before Mr. Ormerod shied his castor into the ring."

THE New York Sun is referring to the Treas[illegible] The fact remains that [illegible] There [illegible] A [illegible] sidera[illegible] [illegible] expen[illegible] [illegible] presen[illegible] [illegible] invariably result in [illegible] keeper[illegible] [illegible] war[illegible] [illegible] for increased [illegible]

IS [illegible] phia [illegible] char[illegible] made against him [illegible] Lewis Emery, Jr., of Bradford. The matter, however, is treating this modest request in dignified silence while the Press has been forced to acknowledge him as Quay's Republican candidate for Governor. Can honest self-respecting Republicans sustain such a candidate?

THE Force bill is meeting with marked opposition in the Republican ranks. It pleases no one, not even its originators. Independent papers do not hesitate to denounce it in unmeasured terms. The New York Herald, noted for its independence and frankness, says: The Federal Elections bill is infamy in its most odious shape, an insult to the common sense and honor of every loyal and right-thinking citizen. However, we get our noble with [illegible] The people are waking up."

Within a few days the Democratic leaders of the State will begin preparations for the campaign. The various methods of educating public interest in the work will be considered, and ways and means devised for bringing the full vote to the polls. This will be the first step in the canvass already more than hopeful. It will be one of the most important

While it is not wise to adopt the suggestions of an enemy it is safe to profit by his advice. Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson, in a recent speech, attributed the diminution of the Republican vote to the fact that the public [illegible] is against the [illegible] of [illegible] turning the title in the Austin. It may be observed that the Republicans are endeavoring to alter the conditions, and now Republican papers are being projected [illegible] At [illegible] two, if [illegible] are to be [illegible] will be [illegible] in this State to the [illegible] Republicans.

A SUCCESSFUL OPERATION.—We extract the following from the Southern New Yorker, published at Binghamton, N. Y.: "Mrs. Thomas Veazie, a specialist, of Elmira, removed from the upper lip of Miss Mollie Russell, of Windsor, N. Y., a cancer, completing the operation seven days after commencing treatment. We learn that she also removed a large cancer from the face of Mrs. Frank Carrier, of South Windsor, a short time since. The doctor has made this dread malady a study, and shows her ability to successfully cope with it. We understand she will remain at Windsor for some days."

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW.—Among the other great attractions at the Inter-State Fair, to be held at Elmira, N. Y., Sept. 1 to 12, will be an exhibition of the noted cross-country hunters and jumpers in the world. Among them will be the celebrated horse "Ontario," who recently jumped at the exhibition given at Washington, seven feet, over a rail fence, and with a man weighing one hundred and fifty pounds. Another equally noted horse known as "Lord Rosebury," who jumped a tie with "Ontario" at the Horse Show at Chicago last Winter, over a fence fifteen inches high. In addition to these celebrated horses there will be from fifty to one hundreds others of repute and excellence.

At night!

At night we two may sit in shadow, open-hearted;
Long since the time has passed when hope was all in sight;
Softly we sing the songs of happy days, departed,
At night!

At night the settler's voice sounds through the shadowy dreary,
Our songs, alas! like his, have neither charm nor weight;
We only read and sing, hushed hopes and voices weary,
At night!

A DAUGHTER WORTH HAVING.

Her Clothes Were Not the Only Beautiful Thing About Her.

Two gentlemen friends who had been parted for several years, met in a crowded city street, says the N. Y. Evangelist. The one who lived in the city was on his way to meet a pressing business engagement. After a few expressions of delight, said:

"Well, I'm off. I'm sorry, but it can't be helped. I will look for you tomorrow to dinner. Remember, 2 o'clock sharp. I want you to see my wife and child."

"Only one child?" asked the other.

"Only one," came the answer, tenderly, "a daughter. But she is a darling."

And they parted, the stranger in the city getting into the streetcar for the park. After a block or two a group of five girls entered the car, they all evidently belonged to families of wealth; they conversed well. Each carried a very elaborately decorated lunch basket, each was well dressed. They, too, were going to the park for a picnic.

They seemed happy and amiable until the car again stopped, this time letting in a pale-faced girl of about 11 and a sick boy of 4 years. These children were shabbily dressed and on their faces were looks of distress. They, too, were on their way to the park. The gentleman thought so; so did the group of girls, for he heard them say, with a look of disdain:

"I suppose those ragamuffins are on an excursion, too!" "I shouldn't like to leave home if I had to look like that—would you?" This to another girl.

"No, indeed; but there is no accounting for tastes. I think there ought to be a special line of cars for the lower classes."

All this was spoken in a low tone, but the gentleman heard it. Had the child too? He glanced at the pale face and saw tears. He was angry. Just then the exclamation: "Why, there's Netty! Wonder where she is going?" caused him to look out upon the corner, where a sweet-faced young girl stood beckoning to the car-driver. When she entered the car she was warmly greeted by the five and they made room for her beside them. They were profuse in exclamations and questions.

"Where are you going?" asked one. "Oh, what lovely flowers! Who are they for?" asked another.

"I was on my way to Belle Clark's. She is sick, you know, and the flowers are for her."

She answered both questions at once, and the glanced toward the door of the car, saw the pale girl looking wistfully at her. She smiled at the child, a tender look beaming from her eyes, and then forgetting she wore a handsome velvet skirt and costly locket, and that her shapely hands were covered with well-fitted gloves, she left her seat and crossed over to the little one. She laid her hand on the boy's thin cheeks, as she asked of his sister:

"This little boy is sick, is he not? He is your brother, I am sure?"

It seemed hard for the girl to answer, but finally she said:

"Yes, miss, he is sick. Freddie better has been well. Yes, miss, he is my brother. We're going to the park to see if it won't make Freddie better."

"I am glad you are going," the young girl replied in a low voice, meant for no one's ears but those of the child. "I think it will do him good; it's lovely there, with the flowers all in bloom. But where is your lunch? You ought to have lunch after so long a ride."

Over the little girl's face came a flush.

"Yes, miss, we ought to for Freddie's sake; but you see we didn't have any lunch to bring. Tim—he's our brother—he saved these pennies so as Freddie could ride to the park and back. I guess, mebbe, Freddie'll forget about being hungry when he gets to the park."

There were tears in the lovely girl's eyes as she listened, and very soon she asked the girl where she lived, and wrote the address down in a tablet which she took from a bag on her arm. After riding a few blocks she left the car, but she had not left the little ones comfortless. Half the bouquet of violets and hyacinths were clasped in the sister's hand, while the sick boy, with radiant face held in his hand a package, from which he helped himself now and then, saying to his sister in a jubilant whisper:

"She said we could eat 'em all, every one, when we got to the park. What made her so good and sweet to us?"

And the little girl whispered back: "It's 'cause he's beautiful, as well as her c[illegible]
